Holding the Line Online

A brief Parent's Guide to Keeping Their Children Safe Online
By Patrick McGuire, MSW,
Safe Environment Office, Archdiocese of New York
Used with permission.

As if parenting did not used to have enough challenges, along comes the internet. Keeping an eye on the neighborhood bully is one thing, but spotting the efforts of a faceless and malicious stranger requires some adjustment to historical parenting skills. The internet can provide countless benefits to your family, but the wide-open access to information can present substantial lures and temptations to children of all ages. Whether it may be naiveté, curiosity, or the desire to find answers to difficult questions, children are very much aware that answers can be found online for any query imaginable. How do parents utilize the power of knowledge and convenience that is the World Wide Web while protecting our families from the unsavory efforts of those who abuse the same tool? These are some tips on making the family computer not only more user friendly, but more family-friendly as well.

Watch for warning signs:

- Your child spends large amounts of time on-line, especially at night.
- You find pornography on your child's computer.
- Your child turns the computer monitor off or quickly changes the screen on the monitor when you come into the room.
- Your child becomes withdrawn from the family.

• Your child is using an on-line account belonging to someone else.

Actively protect your children

• Actively supervise your kids when they are online. You would when they were crossing the street or in the pool wouldn't you?

• Talk to your child about sexual victimization and potential online danger.

• Spend time with your children on-line. Have them teach you about their favorite on-line activities.

• Keep the computer in a common room, not their bedroom. It is much more difficult for a computer-sex offender to communicate with a child when the computer screen is visible to a parent or another member of the household.

Like it or not...ready or not, keeping our kids safe online is part of our responsibilities as parents. Safety on the web requires action from two perspectives; that of the adults and that of the children. As those who define the structures of our households, it falls to us to secure our digital perimeter, to hold the line. Like every other safety practice in the home or family, it all comes down to writing the rules, living by the rules, and, if necessary, enforcing the rules.

Walking the Line While Online

A Brief Primer for Adults To Share With Children and Teens About Internet Safety

By Patrick McGuire, MSW,

Safe Environment Office, Archdiocese of New York
Used with permission.

Going online can be much like walking a tightrope; it's probably for the best if you don't get too distracted. Have you ever wondered what might happen right before you double click your web browser? The internet literally brings the world to your fingertips, but though the world holds many things wonderful, it also harbors many dangers. And on the World Wide web especially, those dangers can be very, VERY well disguised. Just as surely as if you and your family were traveling to a foreign country, you need to do your part to keep them and yourself safe from harm. Have fun, enjoy the sights, but be careful as you go about your business. With that in mind, here are some of the basics.

Never give out personal information to anyone online (like your name, address, phone number, school name, where you hang out).

Don't give personal information like your name and birthdate in a screen name.

Never arrange a face-to-face meeting with someone you meet online.

Always let a parent know if someone online asks you to meet them someplace.

Never get into chat rooms unless your parents approve.

Never open emails from people you don't know.

Always keep your passwords secret.

Never send pictures of yourself to someone without your parent's approval.

Never post pictures of yourself online (even on MySpace and Facebook).

Never go to links you don't recognize.

Always let your parents know if someone offers you a gift.

Always tell an adult if you see anything or get a message that is hostile, threatening, suggestive, obscene, or makes you feel uncomfortable.

Don't believe everything you read-online. Something that is "too good to be true" probably is. People aren't always what they claim to be.

Understand that your parents will be looking after you to protect you ---even if that means "invading your privacy" or "spying on you."

The internet is one of the most useful and powerful tools ever invented. And, like most powerful tools, it really should come with instructions and a user's guide. The instructions are pretty straight-forward, but the user's guide would definitely include some precautions because, like every other tool ever invented, the internet is neither good nor bad, but is can be used by both good and bad people. That's what this is about; consider this a brief user's guide for using the internet safely.

¡BIENVENIDOS!
13 DOMINGO DEL TIEMPO
ORDINARIO.

LECTURAS PARA EL DIA DE HOY:

1 Lectura: Hch 12,1-11: La Iglesia oraba insistentemente por Pedro

2 Lectura: 2Tm 4,6-8.17-18: Ahora me aguarda la corona merecida

Evangelio: Mt 16,13-19: ¿Quién dice la gente que es este Hombre?

Jesús empieza a interrogar a sus discípulos. Es una forma de asegurarse que están comprendiendo sus enseñanzas. Al preguntarles: “y ustedes, ¿Quién dicen que soy?” deja a todos fuera lugar y solo Pedro, iluminado por Dios, responde: tu eres el Mesías, el hijo de Dios vivo”. Jesús, complacido con esta respuesta, declara a Pedro la base sobre la que construirá nuestra iglesia. Da inicio así, a nuestro caminar, por llevar la fe a todo el mundo, con el papa, como sucesor de pedro, al frente de este esfuerzo.

Así como el papa Benedicto XVI es el sucesor de Pedro en nuestros días, nosotros los católicos de hoy, somos los sucesores de los primeros seguidores de Cristo; por eso, tenemos la gran misión de seguir llevando con nuestro ejemplo de vida, las enseñanzas de Cristo al mundo. Tenemos que hacer ver que Cristo no solo es un profeta más; ni mucho menos un personaje histórico que vivió hace más de 2000 anos.

Demostremos al mundo que Cristo es Dios hecho hombre, que el nos ama y nos guía cada día, es nuestro mejor amigo, a quien llevamos dentro y amamos con nuestro corazón y con nuestros actos.

Alimentemos esta fe en Cristo con la oración y la reflexión de sus palabras. Con sencillez y humildad, recibámoslo en la eucaristía y pongamos nuestro granito de arena para continuar la iglesia que Cristo fundo con las palabras que hoy escuchamos en el evangelio.
